Munsch Hardt Named Among Top 100 Places to Work by The Dallas Morning News

11.02.18

The Dallas Morning News

(DALLAS) For the fifth year in a row, Munsch Hardt Kopf & Harr, P.C. (Munsch Hardt) was recognized among the Top 100 Places to Work 2018 by The Dallas Morning News, ranking No. 15 in the small company category (under 150 employees). Munsch Hardt is the only law firm to be recognized by the publication for five consecutive years.

Winners are selected based on an independently conducted, anonymous survey in which employees provide insightful feedback about the Firm's direction, execution, conditions, managers, work/life balance and compensation.

"Few are repeatedly honored on The Dallas Morning News' Top 100 Places to work list," said Phil Appenzeller, CEO of Munsch Hardt. "We work hard every day, not just for our clients, but for ourselves and our peers to ensure we're fostering a positive environment that makes employees excited and proud to come to work every day. It's humbling that year after year employees recognize and appreciate the culture we've created and continue to build here."

Throughout the years, accolades from Munsch Hardt employees have included:

"Great leadership with forward-thinking ideas. The people here are great, and we have tons of perks."

"From day one, I have been treated as an equal with the other more senior attorneys at the firm. And really, every single person at the firm, no matter their position or rank, is treated with respect."

"I am proud of our law firm. There are lot of good, honest, decent people here."

"I love this place because everyone here is viewed as important. From entry level to C-level, opinions are encouraged and appreciated."

"I am able to bring new ideas and thoughts to the program. I feel I am being heard and listened to. MHKH really appreciates employees as people, not just someone who bills or processes their work."

This year marks the 10th annual Top 100 Places to Work survey. Winners were honored during the annual luncheon on Thursday, November 1, 2018 at the Omni Dallas. Munsch Hardt has been ranked from 2013-2018.
