Overview

Todd is a seasoned trial lawyer who primarily focuses his practice on complex commercial litigation and arbitration, both domestic and international, with an emphasis on upstream oil and gas and business disputes.

Todd also has extensive experience in catastrophic accident and failure analysis cases (e.g. refinery explosions, fracture stimulation vehicle fires, downhole well failures, personal injury, vessel casualties/pollution) and all appellate matters related to such cases. He also has significant experience in matters that arise from disputes related to commercial real property tax valuations, freeport exemptions and other complex tax litigation.

Todd has tried and arbitrated various disputes in both state and federal courts around Texas, ranging from title disputes within adversarial bankruptcy proceedings, personal injury and wrongful death matters, to tortious inference and intellectual property claims.
